

Review of the Consumer Price Index, 2019

(Index reference period August 2019=100)

Introduction

The Consumer Price Index (CPI) is an important economic statistic designed to measure the relative change in the prices paid by households in Maldives. Globally, the CPI is the most widely used measure of a country's inflation rate. To ensure that the CPI provides the best possible measure of current price changes, statistical agencies need to undertake a review of the CPI on a routine and periodic basis, preferably no more than every five years.

The principal purpose of these reviews is to update the market basket of goods and services covered by the CPI in order to reflect changes in the expenditure patterns of Maldivian households. Over time, expenditure patterns change and it is important that the CPI remains representative. New goods and services emerge. Outlets close and new types of outlets open. All of these changes need to be reflected in the CPI. Finally, updating the CPI provides an opportunity to review and update the methodology used to compile the CPI.

The National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) has completed the latest review of the CPI and updated the market basket to using expenditure data collected from households during the 2016 Household Income and Expenditure Survey (HIES). Along with updating the basket, the NBS has implemented the Classification of Consumption According to Purpose (COICOP) 2018 and improved the rent survey. The index reference period is August 2019. This new (2019) CPI was published in October 2019. The new index has been linked to the old data series to create a continuous time series of data.

This article presents the 2019 CPI and highlights the changes in the weighting pattern and describes the additional improvements implemented. For a more detailed description of compilation methods, please see CPI guide 2019 at http://statisticsmaldives.gov.mv/nbs/wp-content/uploads/2019/10/GuideToCPI_Maldives2019-Publication.pdf

Definition and calculation of the CPI

The simplest way of thinking about the CPI is to imagine a basket of goods and services comprising items representative of those purchased by Maldivian households. Now imagine the basket is purchased each month. As prices change from one month to the next, so too will the total price (or cost) of the basket.

The CPI is simply a measure of the changes in the price of this fixed basket as the prices of items in it change.

The CPI basket covers only items purchased for consumption by resident households. Goods and services purchased for business purposes are excluded from household consumption. Furthermore, other non-consumption expenditures such as loan repayments and purchases of shares and other financial assets are excluded.

Geographically, indexes are compiled for Male, Atolls, and the Republic. The CPI for Male' covers the price changes in the capital city while the CPI for the Atolls cover the rest of the country. Prices are collected from Male' and the four main islands, namely Hd. Kulhudhuffushi, GDh. Thinadhoo, Gn. Fuvahmulah and S. Hithadhoo.

Collection of prices for the CPI is carried out by the NBS staff. Price data collection for the majority of the items is done on a monthly basis, distributing all outlets to different weeks of the month.

Why update the CPI?

No economy remains static, regardless of its socio-economic performance or development level. Products emerge and evolve, or become obsolete. New services replace older ones. Technologies advance, and expenditure patterns change in response to new socio-economic developments and product availability. Changes in the structure of the CPI is are necessary if economic trends and changing expenditure patterns are to be reflected accurately.

The following changes to the CPI will be introduced from September 2019:

- Both the basket of goods and services priced, and the weights given to each item in the basket, has been updated. This has been largely based on data gathered through the 2016 HIES.
- New version of the Classification of Individual Consumption (COICOP) implemented.
- Updated methodology for the rent survey.
- The CPI will be re-referenced to August = 100.

New Weights and Basket

During the period between the most recent HIES of 2016 and the previous one conducted in 2010, expenditure patterns changed in response to increasing incomes and the availability of new products. These changes resulted in shifts in the proportion of expenditure on basic commodities such as food, and an increase in the spending on housing (rent) and durable goods such as mobile phones and other amenities.

As households tend to spend more on some items and less on others, weights are used to ensure that the CPI reflects the relative importance of each item in the CPI basket, as a proportion of household expenditure.

The weighting pattern for the 2019 CPI was derived from the expenditure estimates from the 2016 HIES. The HIES expenditure estimates were classified according to the United Nations Classification of Individual Consumption by Purpose (COICOP). These expenditure estimates were price updated to reflect price levels in Aug 2019, taking into account price changes from 2016 to Aug 2019. The effect of this price updating is simply to preserve the quantities underpinning the 2016 expenditures while delivering contemporary expenditure weights (as it is not meaningful to present weights in terms of relative quantities).

Note: Television, information processing equipment and repair of those equipment which were previously in recreation and culture category are now included under the Information and communication category. The new series adopted the COICOP 2018, which includes 13 categories with insurance and financial services as a new category.

The lower weight for food does not mean that Maldivians are spending less money on food. Rather, it reflects higher income levels, with more money being spent on other goods and services, namely housing, water and electricity, and hotels cafés and restaurants. As a result, the proportion of expenditure on food relative to other goods and services is lower.

Note: CPI relative weights for COICOP groups, sub-groups and expenditure classes for Republic, Male' and Atolls for 2016 is given in appendix 1.

Expanded coverage of items and outlets

The categories for which weights are shown above are still too broad for the direct identification of the specific goods and services that need to be priced. In determining the basket required for pricing, the objective is to choose items that are representative of the broad categories of expenditure shown above. The 2016 HIES provided the main source of information for deciding on the composition of the CPI basket. In order for an item to be included in the basket, a product had to meet a certain percentage within the COICOP category. Furthermore, intensive research was carried out in Male' as well as in the Atolls in preparing product specifications, and outlet selection.

During the review, the CPI basket of goods and services as well as the sample of outlets were reviewed and updated to reflect current consumption patterns. The goods and services included for pricing in the CPI are representative of those commonly purchased by the majority of households. For the 2019 CPI, the number of items selected was expanded to 298, from 261 in the 2012 based CPI. CPI basket 2019 is given in appendix 2.

The outlets covered in the CPI include a wide range of retailers and service providers commonly frequented by customers. The total number of outlets selected for pricing in the 2019 CPI was increased to 567 from 358 Outlets in 2019 based series.

Important new inclusions in the CPI basket are rent for one bedroom, two bedroom, three bedroom, four bedroom apartments, air condition, tailoring fee, insurance etc. Some of the products which were dropped from the basket are office tie, kerosene, wooden chair, mosquito kit, compact set etc

As was the case in the previous CPI, Male' and Atoll have their own consumer baskets, which means that the CPI is more responsive to buying patterns at a local level which will result in more prices being collected per product, which will enhance the robustness of the CPI.

Linking and re-referencing the index series

Re-referencing

The index reference period for a price index is that period for which the index numbers are set to equal 100. Re-referencing of the CPI refers to the process of changing the reference base period. This process does not revise the history of past price behavior, it simply re-scales the index numbers to a more contemporary base. The CPI has been re-referenced with a new index reference period of August 2019 = 100.

Linking the index series

Due to the changes to the commodity classification of the new CPI, the first task in linking the new series to the old is to identify those series from the old CPI that correspond as closely as possible to the commodity/regional coverage of series for the new CPI.

In order to link the old index series to the new, it is necessary to calculate a link factor for each series. The link factor for any series is given by the ratio of the index number for the new series to the index number for the old series at the link period, which in this case is June 2012. That is:

The link factor is calculated below for selected commodities/commodity groupings.

Table 4: Indexes for the link period and link factors

Description	Aug 2019		Link factor
	New series	Old series
Food & beverages	100.00	111.20	=(111.20/100.00*100)
Fish	100.00	107.58	=(107.58/100.00*100)
Food & beverages (excl. fish)	100.00	112.78	=(112.78/100.00*100)
Clothing	100.00	95.58	=(95.58/100.00*100)
Overall index	100.00	110.35

It can be seen that the link factor for any series is simply the number that the old index number for the link period needs to be multiplied by to make it equal to the index number for the new series for the link period.

An analysis of the historical series shows that from 1985 to 2019 there is no difference in the inflation rates as expected with the splicing methodology used. The process of re-referencing (which is effectively all that has been done) while changing the index numbers does not change the growth rates (except as a consequence of rounding).

The inflation rate in the Maldives was recorded at 100.04 percent in October 2019. Historically, from 1986 until 2019, the Maldives month on month inflation rate averaged 5.11 percent reaching an all time high of 21.19 percent in October 1992 and a record low of -6.08 percent in October of 2000.

Methodological Improvements

One major improvement introduced in the updated CPI is the rental survey. A sample of approximately 340 rental units have been selected for price collection in the updated CPI. Previously, only 20 rental units were included in the sample of rental units. Rent prices are collected directly from the tenant. The sample has been divided into six, equally representative, panels of more than 50 units each. Each month, prices are collected from one panel. Given the nature of rental contracts in Maldives, it is not necessary to collect prices from all sampled units each month. Each panel is visited twice per year. The price collected is compared to the price for that unit reported six months earlier. For example, in January rent is collected from panel 1 and the collected prices are compared to those reported by the same units for July of the previous year. This results in the calculation of a six-month change, which must be converted into a one month change by taking the 6th root of the six-month change.

Price collection for the new rent survey began in September 2019. During the first round of price collection, each sampled unit was asked to report rent paid in the current month and the rent paid six months ago. For those tenants that did not occupy the unit six months earlier, the landlord or owner was contacted to collect the previous rent paid. Beginning in 2021, 20 or 25 percent of the sample will be rotated out and replaced by new rental units. This not only contributes to minimizing respondent burden, but also allows for the sample to include new construction and new areas. On-going land reclamation and construction on the islands around Male' have increased the housing stock. A rotation policy will ensure these newly built areas are included in the rent sample in a timelier manner.

Updated classification system

The classification system upon which any CPI is built provides the structure essential for many stages of CPI compilation. Most obviously, it provides the weighting and aggregation structure, but it also provides the basis for stratification of products in the sampling frame, at least down to a certain level of detail, and it dictates the range of sub-indices available for publication.

The international standard for classification of individual final consumption expenditure is the Classification of Individual Consumption by Purpose (COICOP). COICOP represents the internationally recommended classification for the CPI.

COICOP was revised in 2018 to reflect changes in consumption patterns and the emergence of new goods and services since the previous version, introduced in 1999.

COICOP 1999 included 12 major divisions, while COICOP 2018 includes the following 13 major divisions:

These are:

- Food and non-alcoholic beverages
- Alcoholic beverages, tobacco and aracanut
- Clothing and footwear
- Housing, water, electricity and other fuels

- Furnishing, household equipment's, carpets and floor coverings
- Health
- Transport
- Information and communication
- Recreation, sport and culture
- Education services
- Restaurants and accommodation services
- Insurance and financial services
- Personal care, social protection and miscellaneous goods and services

These 13 divisions are further divided into 40 groups. The groups are further broken down into 80 classes and again into 136 sub-classes.

Unit value approach for information and communication services

The information and communication services such as mobile phone service have a rapid turnover in the quality characteristics. Service providers adopt different strategies and make dynamic changes in the packages offered to more customers. Thus, it has been challenging to monitor changes in prices following the matched sample approach. For instance, previously representative samples of mobile telephone service plans were selected from service providers and held constant from period to period. Each month, the selected plans were priced; however, this resulted in a flat index that did not show any price change. In reality, prices were changing from month to month as plans and offers from providers changed.

With the updated index, a unit value approach has been adopted to price information and communication services. The average amount paid per unit is used to monitor the changes in price. The total amount paid and total units consumed by different subscribers is used to calculate prices for each service line (e.g. data, voice, internet, etc). Compared to the previous method, the unit value approach inherently captures changes in plans and promotions and better reflects the dynamic nature of prices for telecommunication services. However, there are limitations such as potential volatility in prices due to variations in usage (although these represent implicit price changes), greater burden on service providers to customize data for households only and providing explanations for changes.

Conclusion

The CPI has been updated to reflect more up-to-date weighting pattern and composition of goods and services. It also includes and improved rent survey, updated classification system and movement to unit value approach in information and communication services.

Detailed breakdowns and further information on specific areas of compilation will be available through NBS website, or on request.

(a) Base of each index: Aug 2019=100

The series for the Republic prior to June 2012 was linked to previously published series for Male' and hence the Male' and Republic have the same values prior to June 2012. August 2019 is the base where Index=100 and the base series are calculated and linked to create a continuous time series.

Na-Not available. From August 2019 onwards started using COICOP 2018, which has 13 categories with "Insurance and financial services" as a new category
